JOB PORTAL SAFETY GUIDE

Recognize warning signs and protect your information

Practical guidance • Clear steps • Honest representation

Practical safety guidance for online job searches. A warning sign is a reason to pause and verify; no single check can guarantee that an opportunity is legitimate.

1. Verify the employer and role

- Check the employer's official website and career page independently.
- Compare the sender's email domain with the employer's genuine domain; lookalike domains can be deceptive.
- Be cautious of vague job descriptions, unverifiable recruiters, pressure to act immediately or offers without a meaningful selection process.

2. Treat payment requests carefully

- Be highly cautious if asked to pay a registration, interview, training, equipment or placement fee to secure a job.
- Do not send money or financial details until the request has been independently verified and you understand the lawful basis.
- A request for gift cards, cryptocurrency or transfers to a personal account is a serious warning sign.

3. Protect personal data

- Share only information reasonably needed at the relevant hiring stage.
- Do not send passwords, one-time passcodes, banking credentials or identity documents to unverified contacts.
- Use unique passwords and multi-factor authentication on job accounts where available.

4. Check links and attachments

- Inspect the actual domain before signing in or uploading a resume.
- Avoid unexpected files or links and use updated security software.
- Navigate to an employer's official site independently if a message seems suspicious.

5. If you suspect a scam

- Stop responding and preserve relevant messages and transaction records.
- Report the listing to the platform and, where appropriate, the relevant official cybercrime or consumer-protection authority.
- If you shared credentials, change them promptly and contact the affected service or financial institution.

Key takeaways

- Verify independently before sharing documents or money.
- Never share passwords or one-time passcodes with recruiters.
- Report suspicious offers and seek official help when needed.
